SLP Approach to Discipline:

SLP practices the Conscious Discipline approach, which is part of our positive social/emotional curriculum. Conscious Discipline is based on current brain research, child development information, and developmentally appropriate practices. This is a classroom management program that focuses on the importance of adults making changes in their own lives first. We cannot help young children learn to self-regulate if we are not self-regulated ourselves. When we are more in control of our own emotions, we can better help children learn to process what they are feeling and how to safely navigate those emotions. Teachers and support staff never yell, tease, threaten, or act aggressively toward children in any manner. We acknowledge the emotions children are feeling and help them develop the necessary skills to work through challenging situations. Instead of saying NO or STOP THAT we give the children choices such as You can clean up the big blocks by putting them in the basket or by stacking them on the shelf. What works best for you. We also practice the concept of or mirroring allowing us to recognize the emotions children are feeling, which helps them feel validated and helps them learn how to link what they are feeling to actual words. An example of this would be, you are sad because mommy had to leave. It can be so hard to say goodbye. Our interactions with children are always calm and respectful.
